The 2010 Carmenère di San Leonardo is dark and spicy, with a rich bouquet of black raspberries, curry, and cracked black pepper complemented by sweet clove and tobacco. It's silky and elegant, with a cool-toned personality and bright acids that enliven its tart wild berry fruits and inner florals. This leaves the palate classically dry, receding lightly structured, perfumed and with a tart trace of exotic spice and citrus. A gorgeous evolution has taken place here. This was tasted at the estate from magnum.
