The 2007 Carmenère di San Leonardo pulls you down to the earth and does so with style, as sweet tobacco leaf, brown spice and balsamic tones give way to black currants and hints of custard. It's silky yet focused with cool-toned red fruits, rosy inner florals and hints of white pepper, all motivated by stimulating acidity. This leaves the palate with a bump of spicy citrus and residual acids that maintain unexpected freshness. What a beautiful expression of variety and place. The 2007 is in a perfect spot today. Only 1700 Magnums were bottled of this vintage, no 750s, making this a must for collectors of San Leonardo. Stunning.
