I'm finding masses of ripe raspberry and cherry fruit in the 2011 Terredora di Paolo Taurasi Pago dei Fusi, complemented by sweet exotic spices, with hints of white smoke and dusty florals, as the Pago dei Fusi morphs from sweet to savory in the glass. On the palate, velvety textures usher in wild berry fruits, with saturating minerals and enlivening acids, as fine tannins slowly mount toward the finale. The finish is long and structured, resonating on spicy dark fruits and saline accents with a savory, herbal twang.
